Title of Paper: The Immigrant and Repatriate Experience: How Career Professionals Can Smooth the Way

Abstract:

In a global economy, we have an increasingly mobile workforce. However, as career professionals, we're acutely aware that not all migration experiences are positive ones. This workshop will provide highlights of the challenges encountered by immigrants, repatriates, and global careerists through a review of recent literature and case studies. Topics will include culture shock, transitions, credential recognition, language competency, relocation, and settlement.

Take away specific strategies for helping your clients prepare more realistically for immigration, working internationally, or repatriating after working abroad. Learn about some of the most common challenges faced by immigrants to Canada and web-based tools your clients can access before leaving home.

Share examples from your own part of the world, about those who have emigrated, immigrated, and repatriated. Use this international conference as a strategic meeting place to learn how to better support your clients before, during, and after their immigration experience.

Dr. Neault has travelled, lived, or worked in more than 50 countries and has supported hundreds of immigrants, expatriates, and repatriates as they navigated the complexities of global careers. She has spoken internationally on topics related to the immigrant experience and is co-developer of the Career Management Professional program which includes course on the Immigrant Experience and International/Global Careers. Author of Beyond the Basics, Real World Skills for Career Practitioners, Dr. Neault has a passion for equipping career practitioners to better serve diverse clients. She currently serves as editor of the Journal of Employment Counseling (US) and on the board of the Career Development Chapter of the Canadian Counselling and Psychotherapy Association. Highly respected by her peers, Dr. Neault has received Canadian and international awards in the career development sector and is an invited speaker at local, regional, national, and international symposia and conferences.
